

BEFORE GRAND JURY IN CAMDEN TODAY

Men "Higher Up" Will Likely Be Called Up Regarding Frauds at the Recent Election

Most anyone who amounts to anything in Camden's political field will be in waiting on the grand jury today. Half a hundred of the powers that be and the lesser lights of both parties have been summoned, especially the members of the county executive committees. It is said the inquisitors, who are apparently making an endless probe into political conditions, want to know all about the respective funds, how they are raised, where the money goes and the like.

Far from losing interest, the jurors are just beginning to liven up, it is said, with the result that little or nothing will escape them. Yesterday they had several witnesses from the Fourth ward, the second time these individuals have been summoned within as many weeks. Witnesses were also examined in the case of Clement Ridgway, the negro who is alleged to have murdered Herbert Hibbs, a former city fireman.
