The policemen dismissed and their successors follow: Alexander Osborne, Eighth ward, successor, Thomas Cunningham; John Lightenberg, Eighth ward, successor, Fred W. Triplett; Charles H. Peters, Seventh ward, successor, Millus Appley; John Sailer, Third ward, successor, Harry Miller; Josiah Sage, Seventh ward, successor, Nelson Hubbs; Thomas Buchanan, Eighth ward, successor, Thomas Pooley. Four of the new appointees are said to be Democrats.

An ordinance was introduced to make the following changes in the police force: One chief, salary $1200; two captains, salary $1000 each; two sergeants, salary $900 each; one detective, salary $800; fifty-eight policemen, salary $840 each.

Former City Clerk T. P. Varney was awarded a contract to furnish a safe for the Comptroller's office for $125.

An ordinance authorizing the Camden and Suburban Railway Company to lay vitrified bricks between their tracks on the streets to be paved with sheet asphalt, was laid on the table pending a decision of the Court of Chancery.

Isaac H. Lovett, who was recently appointed a policeman, resigned as a Constable in the Second ward, and Charles Evans was selected to succeed him.

Chief of Police Dodd, who was dismissed by City Council, had been placed on trial before the Police Committee yesterday afternoon on charges of incompetency and using profane language and his dismissal was based on the report of that committee.
