

CAMDEN'S LIQUOR SELLERS.

Those Who Violate the Law Find That
Mayor Pratt Will Make It
Lively for Them.

Mayor Pratt, of Camden, is making it rather warm for the saloon-keepers who are doing an illegal business. Yesterday four cases were before him, and as they are all under the new law the violators, if convicted, will probably suffer severely.

Herman Keller is the proprietor of a saloon at Tenth and Carpenter streets. He was arrested on the charge of selling on Sunday. He was released on his own recognizance for a hearing.

Daniel Hurley, of Seventh and Mount Vernon streets, was also brought up for violations of the Sunday law. He was held in bail for a hearing. Hurley is also charged with keeping a disorderly house. He was held in bail on that charge for the October term of court.

John Cleary, who keeps a place at No. 231 Pine street, was held in bail on the charge of selling liquor to minors. Lewis Mickle, whose saloon is located at Kaighu's avenue and Mount Ephraim pike, was arraigned for selling on Sunday. He was released on bail for a hearing.

David Calahan and Charles Maloy, who were held in the Camden City Jail as witnesses of the fight which occurred on a West Jersey excursion train, during which John Morley, of Twenty-sixth and Parrish streets, was badly hurt, were relieved from custody yesterday, no one appearing to make a charge against Morley's assailant.

A fire broke out about 7.30 last evening in the building in the rear of No. 18 Market street, Camden, and communicated to Nos. 16 and 14, causing damage principally by water to the amount of $2000. The buildings were occupied by John Hunt, a carpet weaver; Lewis T. Derrousse, dealer in agricultural implements, and by Hoovey's restaurant. Hunt and Derrousse are the heaviest looters.

Councils' Committee on lighting is wrestling with the contracts of the gas company and the electric light company for lighting the streets for the ensuing year. The gas company refuses to sign any contract unless the electric light company is limited to placing thirty-six lights on the streets. The latter claim that the committee gave them a contract for fifty or more lamps as they should be needed. The Lighting Committee which met last night adjourned without action.

The recent death from what is alleged to have been hydrophobia in Camden has stirred up the municipal authorities of that city to the extent of appointing a dog catcher to gather in all unmuzzled curs. The catcher will begin his work this morning.

At the annual meeting of the Camden Horse Railway Company, held yesterday morning, the following gentlemen were elected directors: Thomas A. Wilson, John Hood, Henry McKean, Jr., W. F. Rose and C. S. Cowell. The following officials were selected from the Board of Directors: President—Thomas A. Wilson. Treasurer and Superintendent—John Hood. Secretary—Wilbur F. Rose.

The following cases have been admitted to the Homoeopathic Hospital: William Henry Jackson, colored, 10 years old, living in South Camden, head cut and bruised, the result of being struck with a brickbat. James Simpson, aged 25, a stranger, found by an officer at Front and Federal streets suffering from an overdose of chloroform.
