

Collector Offers Dallas Rare Animals for Zoo

Marsalis Park zoo may obtain some rare and valuable African animal species from an Eastern animal collector if an offer made Tuesday by Warren Buck of Camden, N. J., is accepted.

Buck, not related to Frank Buck of Bring 'Em Back Alive fame, conferred Tuesday with Walton Carlton, superintendent of Marsalis Park zoo, and will meet Foster Jacoby, superintendent of parks, Wednesday. Buck said he has just returned from his seventeenth trip to Africa and has in his possession a large number of rare animals which he believes the Dallas zoo could use.

Buck said his collection consisted largely of animals from the deep jungle, including rare members of the monkey family, also grass-feeding animals like the zebra, the antelope and various deer.
